Walden: Solitude By Henry David Thoreau Published 1854 This is a delicious evening, when the whole body is one sense, and inhibes delight through every pare. I go and come with a strange liberty in Nazare, a part of harsiff Act was like along the strange showed of the pool in my abilit-sleeves, though it is one as well as closely and windy, and it see nothing special to tartact me, all the elements are assumately camposite to me. The buildings trump to unher in the sight, and the note of the whitp-poor-will it horne on the rigiding wind from ever the waits. Sympadily with the flattering ability and provide and popular leaves almost takes away my breath, yet, like the lake, my servenity is reposed but not ruffled. These usual waves missed by the ensuing wind are an ensuing wind an ensuing wind are an ensuing wind ensuing win
